REPUBLICAN DELEGATE CONVEN. Beautiful Lecture of Father Graham of Ohio.

SPOKE ON IRISH HISTORY

Giving the Achievements of the Irish Race.

A remarkably polished man, of extraordinary eloquence lauded Ireland and her sons to the stars of heaven last night at the Toler. He was Rev. Father Graham, a Catholic priest of Shelby, Ohio He lectured on St. Patrick, under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, and while a goodly number, principally Catholics, attended, the audience was comparatively smal, considering the deserved reputation of the lecture and the attractievness of the subject. It being St. Patrick's day the color of the shamrock predominated. The stars and stripes hung duced the lecturer, scattering a generous number of choicely formed rhetorical bouquets among his Irish friends in front. The chief characteristic of Father Graham's lecture was his absolute fairness and moderation in reciting the fascinating day and Friday. S. E. Klentz.

story of ireland's wrongs and rights, of Irish achievements at home and abroad, of her woes and sorrows, of her religion before and after the Christian era and of her literature and laws. He began about 2,200 years ago and ended with that great friend of Ireland and freedom-Daniel O'Connell. He insisted that the largest deeds in history were performed in the smallest nations and called attention to the small states of Greece and Rome, as well as Ireland. In a sense he commended the paganism that existed in Ireland previous to St. Patrick, as a better paganism than existed anywhere else. It had to be the paganism than existed anywhere else. For St. Patrick's Day Entertainment. The housewife whose chief delight is the getting up of little feasts for the entertainment of her friends always hails with delight any occasion out of the ordinary that supplies a motive for unique and novel affairs. It matters little whether the day holds any special significance to her so long as it furnishes a good excuse for the display of her tal-ents in the line of entertaining. There is net a month in the year that does not give at least one day upon which the ambitious hostess may exercise her ingenuity and taste in carrying out the suggestion of the day in the dishes and decorations on her table. There may be but the merest suggestion given in the color scheme and class of dishes or both dishes and colors as well as kind of decorations may be most pronouncedly emblematic of the event celebrated. St. Patrick's day furnishes an opportunity for a luncheon or a dinner that may be very graceful and dainty if one carries out only the idea suggested by the color symbol, the emerald green, blended and toned down, with white, and here and there just a touch or thread of gold. If one wishes to go further and and seeks the novel rather than the dishes favored by custom and more fastidious taste, there are some curious and typical creations which are most appropriate for this gala-day, Every year the stationers who deal in table novelties display some fetching littie tricks in the shape of favors, cards, candle shades, etc. But the shamrock. harp. Irishman and his beloved potato hold conspicuous place.
